Monkey Type The infinite monkey theorem states that a monkey hitting keys at random on a typewriter keyboard for an infinite amount of time will almost surely type any given text, such as the complete works of William Shakespeare. In fact, the monkey would almost surely type every possible finite text an infinite number of times. However, the probability that monkeys filling the observable universe would type a complete work such as Shakespeare's Hamlet is so tiny that the chance of it occurring during a pe Infinite monkey theorem - Wikipedia 1987 - In the one-act play Words, Words, Words by David Ives, three monkeys named Milton, Swift, and Kafka have been confined to a cage by a Dr Rosenbaum, who has the hypothesis: "Three monkeys hitting keys at random on typewriters for an infinite amount of time will almost surely produce Hamlet." The play's humour mainly involves literary references, including moments when the random typing produces passages from great works of literature. Infinite monkey theorem in popular culture - Wikipedia The monkey typewriter theory hypothesis theorem says that if a certain (large, often considered infinite, depending on who's saying it and what number they can think of randomly) number of monkeys were given typewriters and a really long time, they could write the works of some random famous writer (e.g. Shakespeare, Dickens, etc. — it doesn't really matter). typewriters 'close to reproducing Shakespeare' Millions of virtual monkeys have almost typed out the entire works of Shakespeare by bashing random keys on simulated typewriters. Monkeys at typewriters 'close to reproducing Shakespeare' According to Monkeys and Typewriters, this is the fundamental human position not just on Shakespeare but on every word out in existence. The premise is far from being radically original, but it is perennially engaging. Monkeys and Typewriters is not immensely original, but it does have a fair amount to recommend it. Monkeys and Typewriters: 3 star review by Rory Mackenzie 21. It is said that a million monkeys with a million typewriters typing randomly for millions of years will eventually type The Complete Works of William Shakespeare.
